After an experiment in Spain, in Grenade, in a distribution group of pieces and tools for automotive and building's professionals, I went back in France and worked as a sales administrative assistant in a medical society producing navigation softwares for chirurgical orthopedics. Contacted by Amaris, I was seduced by the company, its story and also the job proposed.

Under a spell, I took the opportunity and, for my first experience as a consultant, I joined a society of international road transport where I am a project chief for the SAP deployment in Spain. I am in charge of the project, I assure the communication with local entities, coordinate data trade up, test them and translate environments. I like to be in the group very much. I like the team motivation, and try to do my best! Being part of Amaris gives me confidence, enthusiasm and the envy to go far away because Amaris is a young and dynamic company which gives the envy to surpass oneself.
